From March to November 2020, the DepoSIt consortium developed an Innovation Audit Tool for SMEs. This process has been done in several stages, with the intention to perfect the evaluation of the potential for innovation in companies, as well as their social innovation component. The lockdowns caused by the Corona pandemic hampered with the implementation of the initially planned discussions and testing. In spite of this, the consortium managed with only small delays to evaluate the tool several times and get specialized input from two experts in the regions of Baden Württemberg and Friesland.

The Innovation Audit Tool started with only 8 questions referring specifically to social innovation. However, the application of this first draft did not offer a conclusive image about the social innovation component of the audited companies. Therefore, the questions regarding social innovation were complemented up to 22 in the second draft. The testing of this new draft pointed out the need for explanations of the factors of social innovation, in order to facilitate their understanding. This last aspect was taken into consideration by the DepoSIt partners when sketching the final version of the tool. They also gave it a more appealing lay-out, and 5 instead of 3 possibilities to answer, so that the outcomes of the questionnaire can be more fine-tuned.

In November 2020, based on all the contributions and expertise, the new DepoSIt Innovation Audit Tool was ready to be implemented and used in the further steps of the project.

This project has received funding from the European Union's Horizon 2020 research and innovation programme under grant agreement No 824226

QUANDO L'INNOVAZIONE È SOCIALE

Opportunità per il business dal cambiamento sistemico

A Business Apertif event to disclose the social innovation potential

The DepoSIt Italian partner Friuli Innovazione organized an online event with Ashoka on February 18 to present the business opportunities related with social innovation.

Friuli Innovazione is working on the topic for some years now and through 3 different EU funded projects (apart DepoSIt, BEST funded by AMIF and SIAA funded by Italy-Austria Interreg) its experienced incubator staff is supporting entrepreneurs to develop their projects with specific tools adapted for the social impact business ideas.

The digital event gathered more than 40 participants representing the quadruple helix approach: innovation agencies, businessmen/women, researchers, policy.

After a presentation of the systemic approach theory from the global network Ashoka, they have been engaged in an hand-on interactive groupwork where the several feature of social innovation have been analysed, starting from 4 real business cases in different industries and with different business models underpinning.

The scope of the social innovation audit tool realized in the frame of the DepoSIt project has been presented, collecting lots of reactions from the attendees.

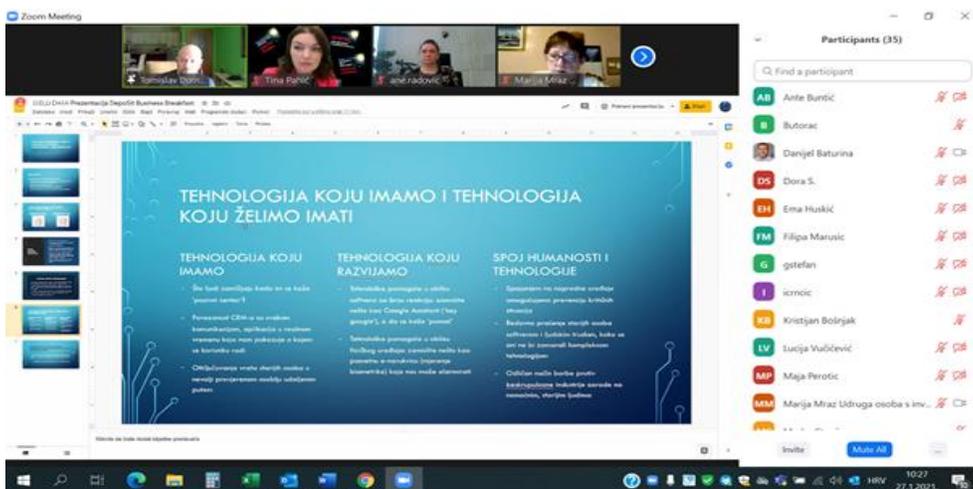

DepoSIt Business Breakfast Croatia

European Policy For Social Innovation

Climate crisis, environmental degradation, social inequality, emerging nationalism and racism, demographic change. As a society we have many problems to cope with. We are aware of this not only since the COVID-19 crisis. However, the crisis has clearly changed one thing in particular: it has shown how connected our world really is. And this insight applies not only to the pandemic: more and more problems are of a cross-border or even global nature, and fewer challenges are locally restricted.

DepoSIt Cross-fertilization workshop Germany

On the 6th of October 2020, the joint project teams of DepoSIt, ASIS and Finance4Social Change of Steinbeis-Europa-Zentrum and Steinbeis 2i GmbH, in cooperation with Max-Weber-Institute for Innovation online. 19 participants coming from social enterprises, public authorities, the civil society, and business support organizations were present at the workshop, representing a wide range of interests and knowledge.

In the first part of the workshop, the project teams each presented their project in a plenary session, which helped to set the used terminology for social innovation. This gave participants a basis for the subsequent discussions.

The second part of the workshop was designed as a World Café. The organizers and experts prepared 3 “tables” focusing on different success factors for social enterprises and social innovation. Divided into 3 groups, the participants got to spend around 15 minutes at each “table”, discuss about the respective topic, exchange experiences, and identify challenges and weaknesses of the existing support schemes.

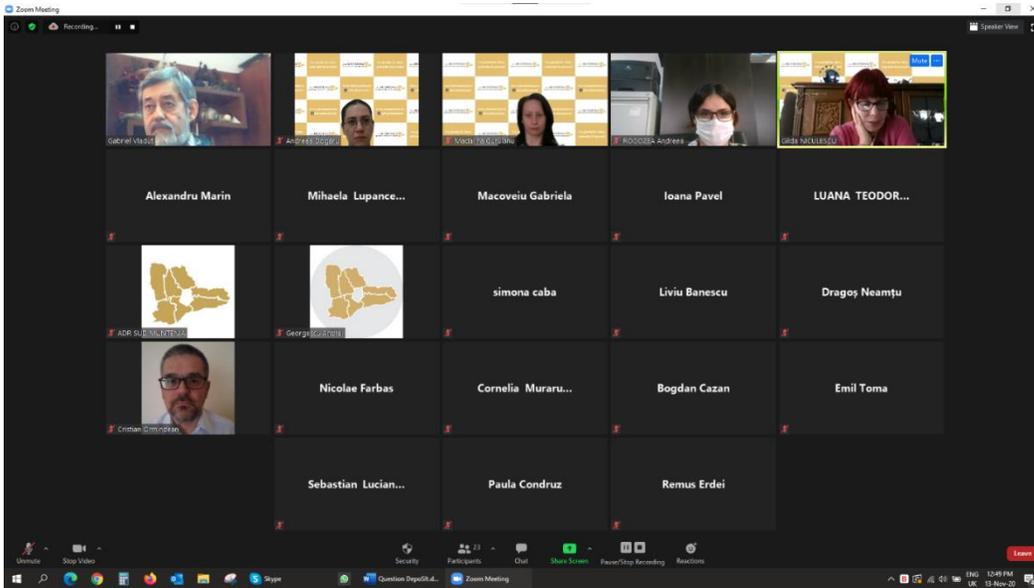

The Cross-fertilization workshop within the DepoSIt project successfully reached its goals. The participants had the possibility to network and obtained more information on the current status of innovation audit schemes and especially about their effectiveness.

The synergies developed within this event opened new perspectives for the discussions in Social Innovation.

In the project ASIS (Alpine Social Innovation Strategy), the partners aim to define a new approach to social innovation that meets the economic and social challenges of each Alpine region and promotes real change. To support this change, the project has developed an innovative platform, trainings, strategies, and policy recommendations for public stakeholders.

The multi-disciplinary partnership of the project Finance4SocialChange aims to stimulate the access of social entrepreneurs to innovative financing tools and instruments and enable the creation of a business environment that helps them create more successful companies in the Danube region.

Cross – Fertilization Workshop organised in Romania
